

March 2018

By the exploration of boxes, our students will be able to not only explore, in depth, the elements related to the history of boxes and their changes through time, but they will be able to understand that there are multiple uses and functions that can be linked with these objects. Due to this, it is essential to recognize the importance behind the individual trajectory and the social context in regards to the meaning of an object, which in this case are boxes. From this, we want to promote our students' curiosity, as well as their need to explore, always taking into account the existence of other contexts besides their own. This is relevant because it not only promotes behaviors linked to respect, empathy and understanding, but it also permits our students to be aware of the bigger picture concerning the diversity of the world they live in.
